Roblon announces changes to the Executive Management

In recent years, Roblon's core business has evolved to focus on the development, production and supply of high-performance fibre solutions and technologies within the telecommunications and energy sectors. According to several of Roblon's customers as well as external business intelligence, the coming years are expected to see positive growth rates in the market segments that Roblon addresses. The Group's growth strategy for the period towards 2025/26 targets selected global key customers with Key Account Management, Innovation and Operational Excellence as the core processes.

To step up the execution of the strategy, Roblon is adjusting its Executive Management, reducing it from three members to two. At the same time, increased resources are being allocated to recruiting additional staff with the relevant professional skills. In this connection, CEO Lars Østergaard is resigning his position with immediate effect. Kim Müller, currently CTO, has been appointed CEO, and Carsten Michno, currently CFO, has been appointed Co-CEO/CFO. Both have long experience in top management within the Roblon Group.
