Recruitment of Exploration Manager

Jari Juurela, the Boliden Kylylahti Geology Manager, originating from the mining town of Outokumpu in Finland, has been employed as Copperstone's Exploration Manager.

Copperstone has recruited Jari Juurela as Exploration Manager. The recruitment follows on last year's financial build up, our successful drill campaign and initiated push for a mine at Viscaria in Kiruna.

"Jari Juurela is a great fit for the Copperstone team, with his versatile experiences from international mineral resource projects and within exploration, most recently at Boliden Kylylahti," says CEO Michael Mattsson.

Since the acquisition of Viscaria, Copperstone has ramped up the team with a strong Technical Committee, Ian Holman as Study Manager and now Jari Juurela as Exploration Manager.

"I am very pleased to join Copperstone in such an exciting time. Copperstone owns the interesting advanced Viscaria-project with near future mining opportunity combined with attractive near mine and regional exploration targets. I am looking forward to work in the Copperstone exploration team to continue to grow resources and discover new interesting targets.", says Jari Juurela.

"At this point we put much emphasis on our Kiruna operations, yet I am just as eager to have Jari start working on our large-scale project in Arvidsjaur," Michael Mattsson concludes.
