Trifork and its subsidiary Nine have been selected as one of six suppliers for a new, comprehensive IT development framework agreement with The IT and Development Agency of the Danish Ministry of Taxation (Udviklings- og Forenklingsstyrelsen, also known as UFST). The agreement spans four years and has a total financial framework of up to 3.27 billion DKK (~440 million EUR) and covers a wide range of development and modernization tasks that will be crucial for the further development of UFST's extensive application portfolio.

"We are extremely pleased to continue and expand the strong collaboration we have had with UFST since 2015, when we delivered our first service. The new agreement allows us to take responsibility for both small and large development tasks as well as the ongoing further development and modernization of UFST's applications, which are central to the Danish welfare model," says Jacob Strange, founder and CEO of Nine.

In addition to drawing on the competencies of other companies within the Trifork Group, strategic partnerships have been established with both Emagine and Copenhagen Data, ensuring that high-quality services can be delivered to meet UFST's extensive needs.

Nine has extensive experience in delivering solutions to UFST, including involvement in the development of a data exchange platform, an accounting guide for citizens, businesses, and the EU, as well as a calculation engine for property taxes in Denmark.
