HIGHLIGHTS

European and US equity markets continued their rally into November with the Euro Stoxx 50® Total Return up +9.7% and the S&P500® Total Return up +5.6% for the month. Overall risk appetite seems to be driven in part by anticipation of the easing of covid controls in China along with expectations that policymakers will pause rate rises as inflation starts to cool. The rally also appears to have a number of technical drivers which may not be sustained by fundamentals.

The market implied volatility measure VStoxx® decreased further from 24.8% to 21.2% and credit markets tightened with the iTraxx Crossover® (S38) moving from 555bps to 459bps.

Convertible bond arbitrage and volatility trading continued to deliver positive returns in November along with a nice contribution from credit special situations, however the fund was impacted by quantitative strategies and idiosyncratic positions in equities. Overall, BG Fund (USD A) was down -200bps in November.

Given the market dynamic we remain very positive on the outlook across nearly all underlying strategies, and in particular arbitrage, event driven and capital structure arbitrage. We also think convertible bond and mandatory convertible bond arbitrage will continue to drive returns as we see very healthy signs of increased future hybrid bond issuance. The risk return available on many merger arb spreads continues to look very appealing relative to historic levels, and in credit, there are growing opportunities for capital structure arbitrage with a number of existing debt situations needing to be restructured.
